

CONTENTS

Preface	11
Introduction – Historical background: Establishment of municipalities in Eretz Israel at the end of the Ottoman period and their status at the beginning of the Mandate period	17
Creation of the baladiyya institution in the Middle East 17; The Municipalities Ordinance of 1877 18; Establishment of the first municipalities in Eretz Israel and their characteristics 19; Establishment of the Haifa municipality and its activity 21; British attitude to the municipalities at the beginning of the Mandate period 26
Chapter One: Organizational development in administrative structure, employment array, and municipal jurisdiction	29
1. Administrative organization and employment scope – Overall structure 29; Composition of the municipal council 31; Committees 34; Number of Arab and Jewish laborers 35; Number of Arab and Jewish clerks 37. 2. Senior office-holders – Biographical background – Hasan Bey Shukri 38; Abd al-Rahman al-Hajj 40; Shabetay Levy 41; Shehadeh Shalah 43; Haj Muhammad Taher Karaman 44; Avraham Khalfon 46; District Commissioners 47. 3. Powers and limitations of the municipality – Fields of activity of the municipal authority 48; Municipal taxation and British government support for the municipalities 50; Criticism of the Municipalities Ordinance 51. 4. Municipal jurisdiction and size of population – Municipal boundary and the city’s neighborhoods 53; Areas of mixed residence 57; Size of Jewish and Arab population 61
Chapter Two: Consolidation of Arab dominance - 1920-1927	65
1. The municipality and its activities – Shukri’s resignation and the appointment of Abd al-Rahman al-Hajj as mayor 65; Highway development 68; Installation of street lighting 70; Role of the Jewish laborers in municipal works 72. 2. Criticism of the municipality – Complaints from the Jewish side 78; Objection to the appointment of a Jewish municipal secretary 84; Complaints from the Arab side 86. Summary 87

Chapter Three: Years of change and surge of development - 1927-1940

89

1. Hasan Bey Shukri and the Jewish Yishuv – The 1927 elections 89; Attitude to the Jews 94; Appointment of a Jewish municipal secretary and penetration of the Hebrew language 99; The 1934 elections 101; Intentions and declarations on cooperation 104; Design of the city's emblem as the expression of a conception 111; A time of crisis with the outbreak of the Arab strike 115; Dealing with the period of the Arab rebellion 123. 2. The Yishuv leadership and the municipality – The struggle for tenders 130; Who will build the abattoir? 134; Hebrew labor 137; Share of the Jews in revenue from taxation 141; Manner of distribution of the welfare budget 144; The issue of establishing a sub-municipality for the Hadar Hacarmel neighborhood 146. 3. The period of the Arab rebellion – a turning point in the status of the Jewish municipal councilors – Crystallization of the attitude to the mixed municipality at the time of the Arab rebellion 153; Perception of the position as a means of furthering cooperation 156; Proposals for administration of the municipality in view of the possibility of partition (1937) 159; Bylaws on stores' closing times 161; The image and work of Hasan Shukri in Jewish and Arab eyes after his death 166. 4. Scope of municipal activity – Highway development 173; Sewerage installation 180; Sanitation 184; Construction 189; Street lighting 193. 5. New initiatives for development – Project for paving George V Avenue and the question of opening the route in the old city 198; Paving the Hadar Hacarmel-Mount Carmel road 208; Street naming 212; Project for building the Town Hall 219; Plan to establish a vegetable market and inauguration of Talpiot market 222; Setting up public parks and planting trees along highways 224. Summary 232

Chapter Four: Consolidation of cooperation and expansion of activity - 1940-1947

237

1. Nature of the mixed municipality and Shabetay Levy's outlook – Goals and expectations 237; Attitude of the Jewish city councilors to Shabetay Levy's policy 241; Bombing of the city in summer 1940 243. 2. Cooperation – A local manifestation – Attitude to cooperation until the mid-1940s 245; Attempts to explain cooperation in the second half of the 1940s 248; Effect of the UNSCOP Committee visit on cooperation in the municipal council 250; Factors that promoted the success of cooperation according to municipal councilors 254. 3. Claims of discrimination among Jews and Arabs – A. Changes in attitude of the Hadar Hacarmel committee to the municipality: Attitude of the Yishuv leadership to the mixed municipality 256; Claims of discrimination against the Hadar Hacarmel neighborhood 257; Taxation policy in the eyes of the Jews 261; Controversy on the establishment of a sub-municipality 269; Bylaw for Sabbath observance in the Hadar Hacarmel neighborhood 272. B. Arabs' criticism of the municipality: Background to the criticism and its characteristics 278; Establishment of the reform council (the East Council) and its work 279; An effort to operate a cleaning service 282; Attempts to stop the work of the reform council 286. 4. Attitude to the development of the city – A. Routine activities: Highway development 287; Sewerage infrastructure 292; Improving sanitary conditions 299; Arranging street lamps 308. B. Special activities: Building the Town Hall 310; Rebuilding the old city precinct 315; Markets and commercial procedures 324; Setting up parks and planting trees 332; Renaming streets 340; Project for building the municipal library 345. Summary 348

Conclusion: The local government and its contribution to the development of Haifa as a mixed city 353

1. Perception of the role of the mixed municipality – The mayors 354; Jewish delegates to the municipal council 355; Arab delegates to the municipal council 356; British government 357; Nature of cooperation and factors contributing to its creation 358. 2. The nature of distribution of resources and its implications for the city's population – Execution of municipal works and urban development 359; Developmental achievements 360; The public's attitude to municipal activity 361. 3. Evaluation of the unique nature of the municipal government in Haifa as a local phenomenon 362. 4. Epilogue 364

Bibliographic sources 367

Indices 377

Name Index 377; Place Index 380; Subject index 386