

CONTENTS

Preface	5
Introduction: Pioneer or Philosopher? An Attempt at a Different Reading of Gordon’s Writing	9
The Man and the Era 11; The Search for Methodology 19; But Why Gordon in Particular? 24; Review of the Academic Literature on Gordon 26; Between Interpretation and Over-Interpretation 32; Structure of the Study 37
Chapter 1 - The Foundations of Gordon’s World-View: Opinion, Subjectivity, and Experience	41
Knowledge, Metaphysics, and Truth in the Writings of A.D. Gordon 43; Gordonian Theology 47; Truth: Between Fact and Opinion 52; Opinion and Life Accounts 57; Facing Reality: Consciousness (“ Hakkara ”) and Experience (“ Havaya ”) 61; Another Look at the “ Havaya ” 68; Conclusion: Gordon’s Position on Fact, Experience, and Truth 74
Chapter 2 - The Individual and its Environment: Nature, Society, and Nationality	78
Nature According to Gordon: Reality, Practicality, and Existence 85; Nature and the Concept of the Organic System 98; The Nation as a Natural System 101; Nationality and “the State of Nature” 106; Another Look at the Concept of Nation 112; Between Nationality and Sovereignty 117
Chapter 3 - A Life of Expansion as Self-Realization	122
The Gordonian ‘Self’ 128; Self, Expansion, and the Attitude toward Others 134; A Life of Expansion and a Life of Restriction 138;

Morality as Operating Principle: Wholeness, Expansion, and Awareness in each Action 142; The Concept of Work 147; A Life of Extremes 155; Expansion, Power, and Authenticity 157

Chapter 4: A Life of Expansion as a Political Life 163

Opinion, Political Involvement, and Self-Realization 167; Politics as a Choir 170; The Purpose of the Zionistic Project – Experiential Community or Independent State? 173; Between Politics and Self-Education 177; Nation/Man (“Am-Adam”): Another Look at the Worthy Life 184; National Creativity and the Question of Sovereignty 192; Gordon as a Revolutionary? 197

Conclusion: Is the “Tzaddik of Deganya” Still Relevant? 203

Bibliographic Abbreviations 209

Indexes 225