

Contents

Introduction	11
“Jewish economics” or minority economics?	12
1. Theories defining Jews’ economics as a unique phenomenon	13
2. Theories exploring the “middle men” role played by minorities	14
The “middle men” model applied to the economics of the Jewish minority in the Regat	15
3. Simon Kuznets’ model for analyzing Jewish minority economics	15
(a) Minority economics	15
(b) Distinctive occupational range of a Jewish minority	16
Kuznets’ theory applied to the economics of the Jewish minority in the Regat	18
4. Historiography and the economics of the Regat Jews 1859-1914	19
The terms “Rumanians”, “Jews” and “foreigners” as defined by the sources	23
Chapter 1 – The Regat during 1859-1914: External conditions for Jewish minority activity	27
(A) Socio-political characteristics	27
1. Demographic background	27
2. Political independence and economic dependence	32
3. Oligarchy of two dominant parties	35
4. Chasm between social classes	37
5. Official economic policy	39
6. Nationalism, “Romanisatio” and the “Jewish economy”	41
(B) The Regat economy 1859-1914	45
1. Traditional farming	45
2. Capitalization of craft	46
(a) Concentration of craft in the cities	47
(b) Women in craft and petty industries	48
3. Development of mechanized (“large”) industries	48
(a) The food industry as the most important sector	50
(b) Development of the mineral industry	50

(c) Protectionism vs. liberalism in industry	51
(d) Foreign investment in industry	52
(e) Industrial companies on the stock market	52
(f) Labor force	53
4. Smallscale and primitive trade	54
(a) Foreign trade	54
(b) Inland commerce	55
5. The weakness of the financial system (currency, credit and banking)	57
6. Development of the public administration	60
7. The occupational structure of the Regat population	61
(a) Professional structure of the urban and rural population in 1913	64
(b) The role of minorities in the Regat economy	66

Chapter 2 – The Jewish minority in the Regat 67

(A) Social, political and demographic characteristics	67
1. Immigration and settlement	67
2. Concentration within developing economic centers	72
3. Organization of the community	77
4. Lack of civil rights	78
5. “Suditi” Jews	80
6. Influence of the Rumanian economic policy on the Jewish minority	81
(a) Monopolies	82
(b) Legislation against peddling	84
(c) Legislation against the sale of alcoholic drinks	85
(d) Legislation regarding the salaried employees and the self-employed	85
(e) Restrictions on free trade and employment opportunities	86
(f) Inequality in the educational system and in professional training	87
(g) Discriminatory initiatives by local populations	87
(h) Consequences and reactions	88
7. Education and professional training	89
(a) Elementary education	89
(b) Professional training	91
8. Summary	93
(B) Economic characteristics	94
1. Occupational structure according to the occupational census of 1913	94
2. The occupational structure of the Jewish women	97
3. The occupational structure of the Jewish population in cities and villages	98

(a) Occupational range of Jewish minority in a big town	98
(b) Occupational range of economically active Jews in rural areas	103
4. Economic level according to the “patenta” fiscal census	104
5. Employment status structure of economically active Jews in the Rumanian economy	107
6. Summary	109

Chapter 3 – Occupational distribution of Jews, Rumanians and foreigners	110
(A) Traders, financiers and mediators	110
1. Context and data sources	110
2. Jews as “middle men” in the foundation of local and international trade and credit	112
3. The significant role of Jews in Moldavia trade	118
4. The level of trade according to the employment status structure and the “patenta” fiscal census	126
5. The geographical distinctiveness of Jewish trade according to the 1904 census	134
6. Jews in trade and credit according to the occupational census of 1913	136
7. The occupational structure of Jews, Rumanians and foreign traders	142
8. Summary	153
(B) Craftsmen	155
1. Context and review of data sources	155
2. The Jews engaged in handicrafts	158
3. The proportion and characteristics of handicrafts within occupational structure of Jews 1901/2	180
(a) Clothing and shoes	182
(b) Wood and furniture	185
(c) Metals	186
(d) Food	188
4. Ongoing occupational structure of Jewish craftsmen 1845-1913	190
5. Employment status structure of craftsmen: Jews, Rumanians and other minorities	193
6. Summary	197
(C) Industrialists	199
1. Context and specification of data sources	199

2. The proportion of Jews in industrial production	203
3. The proportion of Jews in the mining industry	214
4. Jews at management level in industrial companies	219
5. Jewish bankers involved in industry (including the mining industry)	223
6. Status of Jewish industrialists	226
7. Salaried employees and the religion/nation issue	230
(a) Concentration of minorities among professionally trained employees	234
(b) Chronic unemployment among unskilled workers	238
8. The occupational structure in industry: Comparing Jews, Rumanians and foreigners	239
(a) Food industry	240
(b) Chemical industry	240
(c) Clothing and accessories industry	241
(d) Textile industry	242
(e) Metal industry	242
(f) Wood industry	243
9. Summary	244
(D) Public service employees and professionals	246
1. Context and review of data sources	246
2. The proportion of Jews in public service and as professionals	248
(a) AEC professionals (architects, engineers and construction)	254
(b) Annuitants and property owners	255
(c) Journalists, writers, artists and scientists	255
(e) Medical and health care services	256
(f) Public and legal administration	259
(g) Education and religion services	261
(h) Transport and personal services	263
3. The occupational structure in public service defined by religion in 1913	263
4. Summary	268
(E) Leaseholders of estates and forests	269
1. Context	269
2. The proportion of Jews in agriculture	270
3. Acclimatization and activity of Jewish “arendashi” in Moldavia	273
4. The persecution and eviction of the Jewish “arendashi”	280
5. Summary	284

Summary and conclusions	286
Appendices	293
Sources	421
Archive materials	421
The Central Archives for the History of the Jewish People, Jerusalem (CAHJP)	421
The Goldstein-Goren Diaspora Research Center	421
Arhivele Naționale ale României (A.N.R)	422
Archive catalogs	422
Selected items	423
Research publications	426
Memoires, biographies, monographies	435
Index	437